SiriusXM Turns October Into A Monthlong Celebration of Podcasts Featuring Exclusive Live Events With Conan O'Brien, Katie Nolan, Freakonomics Radio & More

From comedy to culture, SiriusXM Podcasts Month gives back to fans with coast-to-coast shows from across its industry-leading podcast slate

NEW YORK – September 30, 2025 – This year, SiriusXM is celebrating International Podcast Day by launching an entire month dedicated to creators and listeners. The company today declared October as SiriusXM Podcasts Month — featuring a coast-to-coast series of live events that bring some of the biggest names in the industry from SiriusXM's podcasting slate directly to fans.

Throughout the month, SiriusXM Podcasts will host exclusive live tapings and special programming from various venues, including its flagship New York and Los Angeles studios, showcasing the breadth and diversity of its podcast slate. From comedy and sports to culture and business, SiriusXM Podcasts Month highlights the industry leader's role as a home for the most dynamic voices in audio and underscores SiriusXM's commitment to connecting listeners with the voices they love.

The festivities kick off on October 5 with a live taping of "Conan O'Brien Needs A Friend" at The Fonda Theatre in Los Angeles. Additional highlights include live sessions of "Busted Open," "How Did This Get Made," "The Bonfire," "Casuals with Katie Nolan," "The Nikki & Brie Show," and "Freakonomics Radio." A schedule below, with more to be announced.

"Podcasts are no longer just something people listen to — they're woven into daily life and culture," said SiriusXM's Senior Vice President of Podcast Content, Adam Sachs. "With SiriusXM Podcasts Month, we're celebrating that impact by turning one day into an entire month of live, can't-miss events with some of the biggest and most beloved names in the medium."

All events will be available to SiriusXM subscribers nationwide — sign up for a chance to see your favorite podcast record live in-person in NYC or LA at www.siriusxm.com/podcastsmonth. U.S./18+. No Purchase Necessary.
