OUR JOURNEY FORWARD

A MESSAGE FROM MUHTAR KENT

In 1978, I started my Coca-Cola career riding on bright red trucks and learning this extraordinary business from the ground up as a management trainee.

For months, I made deliveries, stocked shelves and set up displays. It was tough but invaluable work that helped me understand how we create value and refresh the world—one store, one cooler, one bottle at a time.

A lot has changed in 40 years. Our portfolio has grown from a handful of brands to more than 500. We've built strong businesses in juice, tea, coffee, sports drinks, water, energy drinks and value-added dairy. We offer many more package choices. And about a third of our product portfolio is now no- and low-calorie.

And yet the fundamentals endure. People still look to us for delicious refreshment, and we work with our bottling partners, retail customers and countless others to make sure our brands are well-loved and always within an “arm’s reach of desire.”

2016 was a pivotal and productive year in our journey, as we accelerated the transformation of our Company into a higher-margin business focused on creating value, building our brands and meeting our consumers’ evolving needs.

¹ This paragraph includes “non-GAAP financial measures” as defined under U.S. federal securities laws. Full year 2016 reported consolidated net operating revenues declined 5 percent and full year 2016 reported income before taxes declined 15 percent. See page 32 for a reconciliation of non-GAAP financial measures to our results as reported under accounting principles generally accepted in the United States.

IT'S AN HONOR TO SERVE YOU

For the year, we grew organic revenue in our core business (the Company’s consolidated operations excluding Company-owned bottling operations) 4 percent, and we grew comparable currency neutral income before taxes (structurally adjusted) 8 percent on a consolidated basis. We also returned approximately $8.4 billion to you, our shareowners, through dividends and net share repurchases.¹

500+ Along the way, we strengthened our New Products brand portfolio with more and better marketing, product and packaging innovation and targeted acquisitions. And we rolled out more than 500 new products.

We also launched the “Taste the Feeling” global marketing campaign and our “one brand” strategy to help people see Coca-Cola as a single brand with many equally refreshing variants, including Diet Coke, Coke Zero and Coca-Cola Life. And we introduced an improved version of Coke Zero as Coca-Cola Zero Sugar in the United Kingdom and four other markets, with many more to come.

Our marketing dollars worked harder for us in 2016, with creative approaches that could readily be adapted across multiple markets. We ramped up our brand investments, devoting significantly more to direct marketing in 2016 than the previous year.

A lot has
40 years.

We also strengthened our bottling system. In North America, we accelerated refranchising, selling more territories to new and established bottling partners. Meanwhile, our North America business continued to flourish, with net revenue up 4 percent.

In addition, we agreed to sell our bottling operations in China, fostered the creation of Coca-Cola Beverages Africa and helped launch Coca-Cola European Partners in an important and valuable market.

During 2016, we also gained momentum in building revenue growth through market segmentation. This means focusing more on revenue in developed markets, more on volume in emerging markets and a balance of the two in developing markets.

Meanwhile, we kept making a positive difference in our communities, concentrating on the “three Ws” of women, water and well-being. (For more, please see page 6.)

In short, our plan has been working. And I give my Coca-Cola colleagues around the world tremendous credit.

Now with the leadership of James Quincey, who will become Chief Executive Officer on May 1, 2017, we’re evolving our plans to further accelerate our transformation. (James has more to share in his letter, starting on the following page.)

I believe James is the right leader at the right time. Across two decades, he has led key markets from Latin America to Europe. He knows our business, our customers and our consumers.

Ultimately, we’re working to become a total beverage company, with thriving brands across all types of beverages our consumers want. To do so, we’ll need to keep getting better—acting faster to share brands and innovations across markets while improving marketing and in-store execution.

James has a compelling set of plans, and he’ll have my full support as I continue as Chairman of the Board.

Going back to my earliest days of learning this business, I’ve never been more optimistic about our future—and with many good reasons.

We’re competing and winning in a growth industry, with value rising in both sparkling and still beverages.

With a strong, well-aligned system of bottling partners, we provide our 24 million customer outlets with a significant share of their profits.

And we create value for the communities we serve, with our business and our sustainability work.

24 Million
Customer Outlets

We have many well-loved brands, starting with Coca-Cola, and we keep polishing our brands with compelling and innovative marketing.

We have an amazing team of associates, united by a shared passion for this business. And we have a proven and innovative CEO-elect in James Quincey.

We’re also fortunate to have shareowners like you. We appreciate your support and your confidence, and we’ll keep doing all we can to make the most of your investment.

Lastly, I want you to know what an honor it is to serve you. As I continue as Chairman of the Board, I will remain committed to helping advance the near- and long-term interests of our business, our people and shareowners like you.

Sincerely,

Muhtar Kent
Chief Executive Officer and
Chairman of the Board of Directors

A MESSAGE FROM
JAMES QUINCEY

A STRONG FOUNDATION

In business, nothing of lasting value and durability can be built without a solid foundation. Under Muhtar Kent's leadership as Chief Executive Officer, we've built a strong foundation for continued growth.

Indeed, over the last nine years, we have added nine billion-dollar brands as measured in annual retail sales. Shareowner value has increased by nearly $100 billion. And we have increased value share in the nonalcoholic ready-to-drink beverage industry for 38 consecutive quarters—nearly a decade of consistent winning in the marketplace.

1,000 More Products Through disciplined investments, the Company now has about 1,000 more products in the marketplace than we did in 2007, better aligning our offerings with what consumers want. We have also embraced productivity as a business strategy and competitive advantage.

Muhtar has worked hard over the last few years to refocus our Company on its core business model. A key part of that effort has been driving the evolution of our global bottling system. He has taken bold action to rebrand territories across North America, Germany, China and Africa to strong and capable bottling partners.

These achievements did not happen by accident. We would not be where we are now without Muhtar's strong leadership. Muhtar polishes our brands every day, and we're thankful for his example.

Now we've come to the next stage of our growth story, as we build a truly consumer-centric total beverage company. In 2017 and beyond, we will focus on five strategic imperatives: accelerating the growth of our consumer-centric brand portfolio, driving revenue growth, strengthening our global system, digitizing our enterprise and unlocking the power of our people. I'd like to discuss each of these pillars in turn.

1 Accelerating the growth of our consumer-centric brand portfolio.

Creating consumer-centric brands will demand more from us than ever before. Let's be clear: to create consumer-centric brands, we cannot begin with what we prefer to sell to consumers. We must start with consumers and understand what they truly want in their refrigerators, on their tables and in their hands. Consumers around the world are looking for more natural beverages, sometimes with less sugar, and with more and diverse functional benefits. We have the pervasive distribution system in place to ensure these beverages reach them quickly, efficiently and affordably.

Creating a consumer-centric total beverage company will require a shift in our mindset. Consumers do not see the world of beverages as divided between "sparkling" and "stills." They see a broad, constantly shifting horizon of nearly unlimited choice. Our portfolio is undergoing a rapid evolution to meet those expectations. In fact, I expect more and more of our markets will emulate our business in Japan, which has long been known for product development cycles measured in weeks instead of years, with rapid testing and scaleup. In the future, Japan will look more like our standard than the exception.

2 Driving revenue growth.

We're reshaping our business for the future, focused on providing beverages to our consumers in the packages they want and delivering additional value to our retail customers. Today, some of our fastest-growing packages are treat size: for example, the 7.5-ounce mini cans in the United States. And we're pursuing sweetener innovations and recipe changes to reduce calories and sugar in our beverages. We have more than 500 such reformulations now under way.

The Coca-Cola Company will be an even more compelling place to work.

3 Strengthening our global system.

Refranchising our U.S. operations by the end of 2017—and refranchising other territories around the world—will make our global bottling system stronger. By moving our bottling operations to capable, skilled partners, we're expanding the executional advantages of our system and refocusing our Company on our core mission of building and nurturing brands the world loves.

Through a continued focus on women's empowerment, water replenishment and community well-being, we will work with our bottling partners to protect and grow our social license to operate. We will create shared value for investors, associates, communities, consumers, bottling partners and others, attracting more investment into the system and allowing the virtuous cycle to continue.

4 Digitizing our enterprise.

Technology is fundamentally changing the way we engage with consumers, work with customers and work with each other. As e-commerce changes global shopping patterns, we must put our beverages within a "click's reach of desire." Similarly, we must put actionable data to work inside our enterprise, liberate resources through the use of technology and broadly share data-based learnings across teams and functions.

5 Unlocking the power of our people.

We're building a performance-based culture with a sense of urgency, speed, agility, accountability and entrepreneurship.

Technology is fundamentally changing the way we engage with consumers, customers and each other.

The Coca-Cola Company will be an even more empowering, compelling place to work, where our people can focus on the work that matters. The mentality of doing fewer things, but doing them more effectively, will be spread throughout the enterprise.

It's clear that we need to be faster, more agile, and act with a greater sense of urgency. We will not wait for perfection—we will move with speed even in "beta" mode. We will be both thoughtful and fast. Consumers demand and rightly expect this from us, and we will deliver.

Thank you for your support and partnership as we continue on this journey together.

Sincerely,

James Quincey
President and Chief Operating Officer

BUILDING A SUSTAINABLE BUSINESS FOR FUTURE GENERATIONS

The role of consumer brands is changing rapidly. Even as brands continue to help people meet their everyday needs, consumers now expect brands they love to help solve broader challenges and make the world a better place.

For example, people today want to live more sustainably—and do so, in part, through what they buy. When we source, manufacture and distribute sustainably while strengthening our communities, we bring new shine to our brands and new value to our business.

The Coca-Cola Company refreshes the world with our beverages, our business and our community involvement. In 2016, we made a positive difference with sustainability efforts focused on women, water and well-being.

Women. With our 5by20 initiative, we've worked with our partners to help empower 1.7 million women entrepreneurs in 64 countries with training, mentoring, microcredits and more since 2010. And we're applying the most effective approaches more broadly to reach 5 million women by 2020.

Water. In 2016, we announced we had met our goal of replenishing 100 percent of the water we use five years ahead of schedule. In early 2017, Muhtar Kent accepted the Water Leader Award from the U.S. Water Partnership on behalf of the Coca-Cola system.

Well-being. We continued in 2016 to help improve access to medicine and clean water in some of the most fragile communities we serve. We also ramped up our work to address obesity and help people consume less added sugar by initiating hundreds of recipe changes and increasing the marketing and availability of smaller bottles and cans.

We continued to help improve access to medicine and clean water in some of the most fragile communities we serve.

We've worked with our partners to help empower 1.7 million women entrepreneurs.

BEING PART OF THE SOLUTION

As consumer tastes change and people become more health conscious, The Coca-Cola Company is offering the widest variety of beverages in our history, including more beverages with natural attributes, fewer calories and functional benefits.

Our portfolio includes organic tea, coconut water, value-added dairy, coffee, juices, purified water and more. In 2016, we continued our journey to make such beverages more widely available. For example, we expanded smartwater to more countries, with plans to reach 20 markets in 2017. And we also helped people consume less sugar with more small bottles and cans as well as product reformulations.

We introduced our “one brand” approach to marketing all variations of Coca-Cola as a single brand, reinforcing the fact that people can enjoy great Coke taste and refreshment with fewer calories or zero calories.

Starting in Europe, we improved and rebranded Coca-Cola Zero as Coca-Cola Zero Sugar. Globally, we also increased to 40 percent the number of our sparkling beverages available in convenient small packages of 8.5 ounces or less.

And we'll keep moving forward in 2017 with projects under way to reduce sugar in more than 500 of our beverages worldwide.

A CHANGING MARKETPLACE

Our retail landscape is evolving at a breathless pace.

Today, we serve no less than four generations of retailers that are transforming the way we shop and interact with brands.

It started with mom-and-pop stores, which continue to compete on relationships and proximity. Even now, they account for a significant share of all retail trade globally.

Then we saw the emergence of larger store formats, which placed a premium on variety and value.

Over the last 20 years, we've seen the emergence of online marketplaces, with a focus on speed, convenience and ubiquity.

And now we're transitioning to an era where technology is enabling shoppers to operate seamlessly across and between all types of stores.

The pace of retail change will only intensify with the growing acceptance of digital bots, artificial intelligence, driverless delivery networks, 3-D printing and other technologies.

For companies like ours, this changing retail landscape provides incredible new opportunities to create stronger relationships with our retail customers and shoppers, many of whom are now just a click's reach of desire from our brands.

In the Netherlands,
we're changing
Sprite to make it zero calorie.

STRENGTHENING OUR SYSTEM

As the needs of shoppers and retailers change, we're working to serve them with a unique approach that combines global scale and reach with local relationships and a drive to build value for every consumer, customer and community.

In 2016, The Coca-Cola Company continued our evolution to become a higher-margin business focused on creating value, building brands, meeting customer needs and leading our bottling system. We strengthened our brands and improved our portfolio with innovations in products and packaging, more and better marketing, and targeted investments.

We also worked with our franchise partners to improve our bottling system around the world. Our bottling partners are experts in making, selling and distributing our beverages, building relationships with retailers and restaurant customers, and serving distinct, local consumer tastes.

In 2016, we continued to rebrand our U.S. bottling territories to strong, committed bottling partners, and we're on track to complete this process in 2017.

We also agreed to sell our bottling operations in China to our two franchise bottling partners in this key market. Coca-Cola European Partners began operations, uniting the strengths of three bottling partners to serve much of Western Europe. And we helped create Coca-Cola Beverages Africa to bring scale, efficiency and improved service to 11 countries across Southern and Eastern Africa.

BUILDING A TOTAL BEVERAGE COMPANY

We're making thoughtful, decisive moves to become a consumer-centered total beverage company based on five strategic imperatives:

Accelerating the growth of our consumer-centric brand portfolio. We're building a vibrant, modern portfolio that provides refreshment, great taste, uplift, hydration, pleasure and more.

Driving revenue growth. Every market—whether emerging, developing or developed—has a targeted role to play in growing our revenue.

Strengthening our global system. We're working with our partners to complete the ongoing work of refranchising territories to strong, capable and committed bottling partners.

Digitizing our enterprise. We're leveraging technology to improve the way we engage with our consumers, customers and colleagues.

Unlocking the power of our people. We're making our organization faster, leaner and more agile, empowering our people to act boldly and learn as we go.

As we build brands people love, we share them through a pervasive global distribution system. Our business, in turn, creates shared value for consumers, customers and communities.

As our Company and bottling partners succeed along with the communities we serve, the Coca-Cola system attracts investment to power the next wave of our growth—and the next generation of consumer-centric beverages.

INNOVATING FOR GROWTH

Our innovation story accelerated in 2016 with new and improved brands, products, packages, sweeteners and equipment to meet the evolving needs of our customers and consumers.

We invested in many ways to provide people with more delicious beverage choices with less sugar. In the United Kingdom, for example, we replaced Coke Zero with the improved taste of Coca-Cola Zero Sugar, sweetened more brands with the help of stevia extract and introduced a convenient 250-milliliter slim can.

From 2014 to 2016, we doubled the number of Coca-Cola Freestyle machines to more than 40,000. These state-of-the-art dispensers give people more than 100 drink choices. In early 2017, we began bottling Sprite Cherry and Sprite Cherry Zero in response to their popularity on Coca-Cola Freestyle.

In India, we introduced an affordable new small plastic bottle in 2016 that uses a protective coating to keep Coca-Cola fizzy and delicious, even when transported long distances or stored at warmer temperatures.

In Japan, we introduced 100 products and packages in 2016, including glacéau sleepwater, which contains a green tea ingredient associated with sleep. And nearly two-thirds of our volume growth in Japan came from low- and no-calorie brands.

Meanwhile, our Venturing & Emerging Brands team continues to help us delight health-conscious consumers with beverages ranging from Honest Tea and ZICO coconut water to cold-pressed Suja juices and fairlife ultra-filtered milk.

We introduced 100 products and packages in Japan in 2016 and improved existing ones like Georgia European.

There is nothing more refreshing than an ice cold @vitaminwater #myfavorite @ameliastier

UNLOCKING THE POWER OF OUR PEOPLE

For 130 years, Coca-Cola people have been guided by a spirit of creativity, innovation, collaboration and love of community. And this spirit and passion have allowed us to expand to 200-plus countries and nurture one of the world's most valuable and recognizable brands.

As we become a total beverage company, we will provide the structure, resources and incentives to our people so they are even more empowered to do things that create the most value for our consumers, retail customers and shareowners. Together, we're building a culture that takes risks, learns quickly from failure and shares successes broadly across our system. We will get things done more effectively, with cleaner lines of decision making and clear responsibilities.

Our strong commitment to diversity and inclusion is a key part of our growth strategy. In 2016, for the 11th consecutive year, The Coca-Cola Company was recognized by the Human Rights Campaign with a perfect score on the Corporate Equality Index. And in early 2017, we celebrated the hiring of our 5,000th U.S. military veteran, following through on an important commitment we made in 2012.

Coca-Cola associates are ambassadors in their communities. To celebrate those who go above and beyond, our Coca-Cola Ambassador program shines a global spotlight on some of our most compelling and inspiring people. From flood cleanup to innovative waste-reduction efforts to helping the disabled, Coca-Cola Ambassadors lead by example in creating real and lasting value in their communities.

21ST CENTURY VALUE CREATION

“From the time we get up in the morning until we go to bed at night, the men and women of Coca-Cola are working tirelessly to create long-term value for shareowners.

“Collectively, all of us are guided by a simple definition of long-term value creation.

“It’s about making sure we are a better and more valuable company today than we were 10 years ago. And it’s about doing everything possible today to create greater value for you and all of our stakeholders a decade from now and even two, three and four decades from now.

“In other words, we manage this business not only for the next quarter but also for the next quarter century.

“The shares you own today are more than a reflection of our growth in brands developed, markets served, drinks poured, bottles filled and cases distributed. They also reflect the value we create for a broader set of stakeholders through our 21st century value creation model.

We manage this business not only for the next quarter but also for the next quarter century.

“This includes all the communities we proudly serve around the world. The 200-plus national governments and countless local governments with whom we partner. The thousands of NGOs we support. The 24 million retail customer outlets we help prosper and grow. The nearly 250 bottling partners that bring our beverages to market in meaningful ways to our retail customers and consumers. The amazing 700,000-plus Coca-Cola system colleagues we’re privileged to work alongside. And the people who invite us into their lives more than 1.9 billion times a day.

“This is what our fans, colleagues and partners expect from us.

“Like you, they choose us—and partner with us—not only for the refreshing beverages we provide but also for the way we refresh and enhance the world with our actions and values.”

Muhtar Kent shared our vision for 21st century value creation at the 2016 Annual Meeting of Shareowners at the World of Coca-Cola in Atlanta, Georgia, on April 27, 2016.

BUSINESS PROFILE

The Coca-Cola Company is the world's largest beverage company. We own or license and market more than 500 nonalcoholic beverage brands including sparkling beverages and a variety of still beverages such as waters, flavored waters and enhanced waters, juices and juice drinks, ready-to-drink teas and coffees, sports drinks, dairy, and energy drinks.

We own and market four of the world's top five nonalcoholic sparkling beverage brands: Coca-Cola, Diet Coke, Fanta and Sprite. Finished beverage products bearing our trademarks, sold in the United States since 1886, are now sold in more than 200 countries.

THE COCA-COLA SYSTEM

We are a global business that operates on a local scale in every community where we do business. We are able to create global reach with local resources because of the strength of the Coca-Cola system, which comprises our Company and our bottling partners—nearly 250 worldwide.

The Coca-Cola system is not a single entity from a legal or managerial perspective, and the Company does not own or control most of our bottling partners. Our Company sources ingredients; manufactures and sells concentrates, beverage bases and syrups to our bottling operations; owns the brands; and is responsible for consumer brand marketing initiatives. Our bottling partners and some Company operations manufacture, package, merchandise and distribute the finished branded beverages to our customers and vending partners, who then sell our products to consumers.

Our bottling partners work closely with customers—grocery stores, restaurants, street vendors, convenience stores, movie theaters and amusement parks, among many others—to execute localized strategies developed in partnership with our Company. Through effective collaboration, we are able to sell our products to consumers at a rate of more than 1.9 billion servings a day.

RECONCILIATION OF GAAP AND NON-GAAP FINANCIAL MEASURES

The Company reports its financial results in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States (“GAAP” or referred to herein as “reported”). However, management believes that certain non-GAAP financial measures provide investors with additional meaningful financial information that should be considered when assessing our underlying business performance and trends. Management also uses these non-GAAP financial measures in making financial, operating, compensation and planning decisions and in evaluating the Company’s performance. Non-GAAP financial measures should be viewed in addition to, and not as an alternative for, the Company’s reported results prepared in accordance with GAAP. Our non-GAAP financial measures do not represent a comprehensive basis of accounting.

For additional details regarding the reconciliation of GAAP and non-GAAP financial measures below, see the Company’s Current Reports on Form 8-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) on February 9, 2017 and February 9, 2016. This information is also available in the “Investors” section of the Company’s website, www.coca-colacompany.com.

COMPANY STATEMENTS

Environmental Statement

A healthy environment, locally and globally, is vital to our business and to the communities where we operate. We view protection of the environment as a journey, not a destination. We began that journey a number of years ago, and it continues today. Each employee of The Coca-Cola Company has responsibility for stewardship of our natural resources and must strive to conduct business in ways that protect and preserve the environment. Our employees, business partners, suppliers and consumers must all work together to continuously find innovative ways to foster the efficient use of natural resources, the prevention of waste and the sound management of water. Doing so not only benefits the environment, it makes good business sense.
