Ingram Micro Expands Professional Services Offerings Through Rollouts Acquisition

Scalable network of rapidly-deployable field engineers and technology workforce enhances robust portfolio of professional services readily available to Ingram Micro channel partners

SANTA ANA, Calif., June 30, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- Ingram Micro Inc. (NYSE: IM) today announced an acquisition transaction with Rollouts, a Chaska, Minnesota based IT services company specializing in providing on-demand field technicians and rapidly-deployable workforces to businesses and IT solution providers throughout the United States and Canada.

Rollouts' unique and national technicians network, experienced project management team and extensive online project tracking tool are expected to immediately enhance the high-value portfolio of professional services now available to Ingram Micro channel partners. As an integral part of Ingram Micro Professional Services, Rollouts will build upon its specialization within key vertical markets including retail, healthcare, finance, education and the public sector, to empower Ingram Micro channel partners with the technical expertise and field-deployable resources needed to realize the promise of technology.

"Ingram Micro is maximizing value for our channel partners by bringing to market the solutions, services and support they need to compete more effectively, scale their market reach and expand their technical expertise and professional services capabilities with ease and greater cost efficiency," says Paul Bay, president, North America Technology Solutions, Ingram Micro Inc. "Adding Rollouts' proven and highly scalable workforce and project management services to our professional services portfolio will further enable our channel partners to pursue larger deals with confidence and look to Ingram Micro Professional Services as an extension of their own IT services practice."

Rollouts' current CEO Mark Webster will lead the services practice as director, North America Deployment Services, reporting to Greg Richey, director, Professional Services for Ingram Micro.
