

Effective Date: March 1, 2025

Social Media Community Guidelines

Definium Therapeutics, Inc.'s ("Definium") social media channels are used to share news about what we have been working on, and to engage with the community. This is not the place to discuss Definium's investigational product candidates, research pipeline, or specific names of doctors, hospitals, pharmacies, or treatment centers. We will not engage on these topics, and comments containing this information may be removed.

Please be respectful of others. Do not use disparaging, discriminatory, harassing, or intimidating language or any content that could be considered offensive or violate any law. This content will be removed.

Please do not use Definium's corporate social media channels to promote your product, post advertisements, or solicit business. We reserve the right to remove any links to personal products or services.

Comments that contain personal information, including, but not limited to, your or another individual's home or email address, phone number, zip code, genetic makeup, or treatment regimen will be removed.

Do not share content that contains confidential, sensitive, or non-public information or any content that infringes on intellectual property rights or on the privacy or publicity rights of others.

For any questions related to sponsorships, scholarships, employment, or any other solicitation for services, please do not post on Definium's corporate social media channels. Instead, please refer to our website at definiumtx.com.

Any comments containing information about clinical trials that you or someone you know has participated in will be removed from the relevant page(s).

If you have a medical question related to your condition, do not post. Please talk to your health care provider.

Any content related to a side effect, product complaint and/or other safety information about any Definium investigational product candidate may be removed and will be reported, consistent with Definium's adverse event reporting obligations. Definium may contact you directly to follow up regarding your experience with a Definium investigational product candidate. Additionally, any personal information you provide may be included in internal Definium databases and sent to regulators. If you or someone you know has possibly experienced a side effect while taking a Definium investigational product candidate or would like to report a complaint related to our investigational product candidates, please contact Definium Medical Affairs: medaffairs@definiumtx.com.

We reserve the right to block users from our corporate social media channels who violate or misuse our community guidelines.

DISCLAIMERS

Definium does not create or control and is not responsible for the content or opinions of any users (including current or former Definium employees) or other third parties. Social media accounts that Definium follows, or is followed by, do not indicate an endorsement of the account owner or their products and services.

Definium may provide links or references to other sites as part of its content. Definium claims no responsibility for the content of such other sites and shall not be liable for any damages or injury arising from that content. Any links to other sites are provided as a convenience to the users of each social media platform.

Definium reserves the right to add, remove or modify any content or material posted on the account, discontinue the account, accept or reject those who may wish to follow the account, and respond to any questions or comments addressed to the account.

No other entity other than Definium and its authorized users may represent the company.