The BigBear.ai Performance Center

In addition, BigBear.ai branding will be featured across the fifth-floor suite level of the Northwest Stadium, at suites entrances to the stadium, on the team's practice jerseys, and on other key assets. BigBear.ai will continue exploring opportunities where the company's technology and expertise can enhance the fan experience, in ways that align with the organizations' shared goals and the framework established by the NFL.

"BigBear.ai is going on offense, and this partnership exemplifies our strategy," said Kevin McAleenan, CEO of BigBear.ai. "We're stepping onto the national stage with one of the NFL's most recognized franchises – an organization that shares our deep dedication to innovation and excellence. Our partnership marks the first in a series of decisive moves we are taking to strengthen our position and unlock the next chapter of growth."

The Washington Commanders' 162-acre training complex – now the BigBear.ai Performance Center – houses four grass fields, an indoor turf field, draft room, team meeting rooms, full strength training and recovery facilities, and an in-house content studio. This facility, combined with BigBear.ai's prominent stadium presence, underscores the broad scope of the partnership.

"We are excited to partner with BigBear.ai, an organization that shares our commitment to excellence, community impact, and long-term growth," said Mark Clouse, President, Washington Commanders. "BigBear.ai has been a proud part of this region, delivering innovation and impact from right here in our own backyard. We have been focused on building momentum across every facet of the organization, and our partnership represents the next step in advancing performance, progress, and meaningful engagement with our fans and community."

About the Washington Commanders

The Washington Commanders, owned by a group led by Managing Partner Josh Harris, were founded in 1932 and are one of the original members of the NFL's Eastern Division. The team – which plays its home games at Northwest Stadium in Landover, MD and trains at the BigBear.ai Performance Center at Commanders Park in Ashburn, Va. – has won five World Championship titles, including Super Bowls XVII, XXII, and XXVI. The franchise's storied history has 22 members of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, including multiple Hall of Fame coaches and some of the game's most accomplished players. The Commanders organization prides itself on positively impacting the DMV through the powerful platform of football, working with numerous community groups, charities, and veteran-focused causes each year. Through the Washington Commanders Foundation, the organization provides support and services to more than 179,000 individuals annually, with a focus on children's education, health, and wellness.
