- Net profit was $2.7 million, compared to a net loss of $10.2 million for the same period last year.

Alan Collier, Endonovo's Chief Executive Officer, stated, "The COVID-19 pandemic impacted our operations throughout the second quarter. Putting aside the impact of the pandemic, we did increase gross profit margins, which we believe demonstrates market acceptance of SofPulse[®] and illustrates our strategy implemented in 2019 has a unique opportunity for growth and market acceptance. Many of our customers, including hospitals, had suspended or were forced to limit certain medical procedures and operations due to the pandemic."

"As we enter the second half of the year, we are focused on expanding our sales channels and we continue to discuss and consider unique partnerships that can elevate SofPulse[®] as the leading medical device standard in post-operative care," concluded Mr. Collier.
