Executing Our Plan, Increasing Equity and Reducing Liabilities in Order to Build Long-Term Value

LETTER TO SHAREHOLDERS | THIRD QUARTER 2026

TAMPA, FL / ACCESS Newswire / November 17, 2026 //

Dear Fellow Shareholders,

Third-Quarter Execution and Balance-Sheet Progress

As we reflect on the third quarter of 2026, I believe the clearest message for shareholders is that our strategy is producing tangible results. We entered this period focused on strengthening our balance sheet, simplifying our capital structure, preserving strategic flexibility, and positioning Generation Income Properties for long-term value creation. Our recently filed third-quarter Form 10-Q demonstrates measurable progress on each of those fronts.

During 2026, we completed the approximately $20 million Loci Capital redemption, including retiring the final approximately $4.2 million of preferred equity, thereby removing one of the most significant obligations affecting our capital structure. We also continued to use debt reduction, capital-market transactions, and dispositions to strengthen the Company. As of September 30, 2026, redeemable non-controlling interests on our balance sheet declined from approximately $32.2 million to approximately $8.6 million, a reduction of approximately 73%. Total liabilities were approximately $59.7 million, down from approximately $68.9 million on December 31, 2025, an approximately 13.4% reduction.

The improvement is also visible in stockholders' equity. At December 31, 2025, Generation Income Properties reported a total equity deficit of approximately $3.8 million. By September 30, 2026, total equity had improved by approximately $9.5 million to a positive $5.7 million. Similarly, stockholders' equity improved by approximately $4.2 million, moving from a deficit of approximately $4.2 million at December 31, 2025 to positive equity at September 30, 2026. Those numbers do not mean that every challenge has been solved, but they demonstrate that the balance sheet work we have discussed with shareholders has produced real and measurable results.

We have also been disciplined in monetizing real estate when doing so advances the broader plan. For the first nine months of 2026, the Company received approximately $9.1 million of proceeds from property sales and recognized approximately $1.15 million of gains on property sales. We believe those results reinforce the underlying value and liquidity of our real estate as well as the discipline of our original underwriting.

Consistency, Accountability and Execution

We believe our actions have demonstrated consistency between the goals we communicate to the market and the direction in which we operate the Company. Our priorities have been straightforward: simplify the balance sheet, reduce liabilities, seek to preserve our Nasdaq listing, maintain the strength of our real estate portfolio, protect liquidity, and position the Company to pursue meaningful long-term growth. We have implemented nearly all of the objectives we have publicly identified, and we believe that record of execution reinforces our commitment to doing what we say we intend to do.

A Stable Real Estate Foundation

Our real estate portfolio remains the foundation of the Company. As of September 30, 2026, we owned 15 properties. Throughout this period, we have remained focused on the quality, collectability and durability of the cash flows generated by those assets. In essence, while we have been restructuring the balance sheet around the portfolio, the real estate itself continues to provide the foundation upon which we intend to build.

This matters in the current commercial real estate environment. Many owners are confronting lender pressure as loans mature and refinancing conditions remain challenging. We have worked deliberately to address our own debt profile rather than waiting for maturities to dictate our decisions. Subsequent to quarter end, we extended the maturity of our approximately $5.2 million secured note with Brown Family Enterprises from October 14, 2026 to October 14, 2027, providing additional runway and flexibility. We also do not have any additional material debt maturities until 2028.

Nasdaq Compliance and Preserving the Public Platform

Preserving our Nasdaq listing remains a priority because we believe our public-company platform itself has strategic value. During the third quarter, we continued taking concrete steps toward that objective. On July 9, 2026, we completed a 1-for-10 reverse stock split. On August 10, Nasdaq notified the Company that it had regained compliance with the stockholders' equity requirement, subject to a mandatory one-year panel monitor.

On September 16, 2026, the Nasdaq Hearings Panel extended the deadline for the Company to regain compliance with the $1.00 minimum bid price requirement to November 18, 2026. In light of our expectation that we will not regain compliance by such date, the Generation Income Properties has requested a further extension from the Nasdaq Hearings Panel. We have not as of this date received a response to such request but will make a follow-up disclosure promptly after we received a response.

Management, our Board of Directors and our advisors believe there is significant value in maintaining the public platform. The unsolicited interest we continue to receive in the Company reinforces our view that a Nasdaq-listed real estate platform can create strategic opportunities that are not necessarily reflected in today's market capitalization.

Our Current Share Price Does Not Define Our Value

We believe there is tremendous value embedded in Generation Income Properties that is not reflected in our current share price. We also recognize that recent trading activity may attract investors focused principally on short-term price movements. From where I sit, however, our responsibility is not to manage the Company for a short-term trading outcome.

I believe the opportunity for durable, long-term value creation through the strength of our real estate, a cleaner capital structure, a Nasdaq-listed public platform and disciplined strategic execution substantially outweighs the appeal of any potential short-term gain. Our focus is on building a company whose value can be measured over years, not trading sessions.

Financial Trends and Continued Discipline

The final third-quarter financial statements also show improvement in several important expense categories. For the first nine months of 2026, total expenses declined to approximately $10.3 million from approximately $12.8 million during the same period in 2025; a decrease of almost 20%. Interest expense declined to approximately $2.9 million from approximately $4.4 million, and building expenses declined to approximately $1.7 million from approximately $2.0 million. Our nine-month net loss also improved to approximately $3.5 million from approximately $7.0 million in the comparable 2025 period.

Those improvements are encouraging, but liquidity remains an area of active management. As disclosed in our Form 10-Q, cash and restricted cash totaled approximately $902,000 at September 30, 2026, and operating activities used approximately $446,000 of cash during the first nine months of the year. The filing also includes the required going-concern disclosure. We take those issues seriously. Our response has been, and will continue to be, active management of refinancing opportunities, portfolio optimization, strategic dispositions, capital formation and other transactions that can improve our liquidity and long-term financial position.

Strategic Opportunities and Long-Term Growth

As usual, we continue to evaluate potential strategic opportunities. We are looking for opportunities that can provide new capital, materially increase the scale of our real estate platform, continue to strengthen the balance sheet and create a credible path toward long-term growth. We are not viewing any single transaction as the answer to every challenge, and we intend to preserve alternatives rather than make the Company's future dependent upon one counterparty or one closing date.

Our objective is not growth for growth's sake. Any transaction must be evaluated against the value it can create for our shareholders, the effect on our balance sheet and liquidity, the quality of the resulting asset base, and the durability of the combined company.

A Stronger Company, With Work Still Ahead

Generation Income Properties is in a materially different position today than it was at the beginning of 2026. We reduced total liabilities. We completed the Loci redemption. We moved stockholders' equity from a deficit to a positive position. We generated liquidity through asset sales while recording gains on those sales. We regained Nasdaq's stockholders' equity compliance. We extended an important debt maturity. And we continue to preserve the public platform while evaluating opportunities for the Company's next stage of growth.

We have accomplished a great deal, but I do not want shareholders to interpret progress as complacency. Liquidity, bid-price compliance, and future growth remain important challenges requiring urgency and discipline. What has changed is the position from which we are addressing them.

Building Durable Long-Term Value

Our goal is to emerge from this period as a larger, better-capitalized and more durable public real estate company. We cannot control the daily market price of our stock, and we cannot guarantee that every initiative we pursue will succeed. What we can control is the rigor with which we evaluate opportunities, the discipline with which we allocate capital and protect liquidity, and the urgency with which we execute.

Thank you for your continued patience, engagement and support. I hope the results reflected in our third-quarter Form 10-Q make clear the tangible progress that management and the Board have made and the determination with which we continue to operate. We intend to keep shareholders informed through appropriate public disclosures as material developments occur.

Sincerely,

David Sobelman
President and Chief Executive Officer
