In a presentation published on the company's website on Tuesday, March 17, 2020, Redwood disclosed that it had priced this $637 million residential securitization. The company intends to use the net proceeds it received at closing to reduce borrowings under its existing residential warehouse facilities. Redwood estimates this transaction will increase the financing capacity under its warehouse facilities to approximately 60% of its maximum aggregate financing capacity.

In the same presentation, Redwood disclosed that it expected to renew this warehouse financing facility for jumbo residential mortgage loans. As of the close of business on March 18, 2020, Redwood had $244 million of capacity available under this uncommitted warehouse line. The renewal extends the maturity of this facility to March 26, 2021 on similar terms. The company plans to continue to use the facility as a warehouse line for jumbo loans held for sale in its Residential Lending business segment.
