feature the Intel logo inside. This is the first-ever placement of a logo inside the club's jersey. The new jersey was unveiled today at FC Barcelona's training facilities by Intel's Conrad; Sandro Rosell, president of FC Barcelona; and FC Barcelona players Gerard Pique and Carles Puyol. The new jersey will be worn beginning in the La Liga match against Villarreal on Dec. 14.

"It is a huge satisfaction for FC Barcelona to be able to join forces and share the values of innovation and teamwork with a company of such worldwide prestige as Intel," said Rosell. "We are both trendsetters in our fields, and I am convinced the collaboration we are starting today will be very important. It will mean much more than a financial sponsorship."

Initiatives unveiled today include:

- Providing the latest Intel-based technology to the students at the famous La Masia academy to enable and foster a culture of creativity.
- Supplying FC Barcelona players and coaches with the latest Intel-based 2 in 1 devices, while working with the club to improve its research, training and performance via the most up-to-date technology.
- Working to improve the fan experience through new technology at Camp Nou.
- Delivering the latest technology to the education network FC Barcelona has built across the globe.

About FC Barcelona

FC Barcelona was founded on November 29, 1899 by initiative of a Swiss gentleman called Hans Maximilian Gamper, popularly known as Joan Gamper. He and a small group of collaborators created the club which has come to reflect public awareness of a welcoming and caring nation, Catalonia. Since it was founded, the club has had 39 different presidents. From Walter Wild to Sandro Rosell, Barça has grown into a massive social phenomenon that reaches far beyond the bounds of mere sport. The club has grown along with the city around it, and has come to represent Barcelona and Catalonia all around the world.
