Timeless will air Tuesdays through Fridays at 4pm ET on YouTube and will also be available in podcast form.

Julie, age 23, graduated from Harvard University last May. She is a standing guest host for Salem's nationally syndicated talk radio programs. She has also been co-hosting a show with Dennis Prager since last March, called Dennis and Julie, which airs Mondays at 4pm ET on YouTube and is also available in podcast form. Dennis and Julie is wide-ranging, discussing life's most important themes and choices, often without mentioning politics or current events. In her new show Timeless, Julie will discuss the news as well as offer a perspective involving history, human nature, economics, religion, and other aspects of life.

"Many Americans, especially my age, have regrettably lost the understanding that we've been passed the treasure of civilization -- that it's our obligation to guard and burnish it for the next generation. I intend to reawaken this responsibility in my audience," Julie said. "I also hope to reignite the spark that there is so much more in life to consider than just the politics that we rehash all day."

Dennis and Julie will also air as a regular weekend program on the Salem News Channel, Salem's OTT television network, beginning Saturday, December 3rd, at 9am and 3pm ET, and again on Sunday at the same times.

The Salem Podcast Network is now ranked #11 on the Triton Digital podcast ranker, delivering up to 17 million downloads per month for its 25 podcast offerings.
