According to MarketsandMarkets Research, the IoT node and gateway market is projected to reach 17.18 billion units by 2023, growing at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 30.9% during the forecast period. Smart cities, businesses, hospitals, airports, and banks are dependent on computerized devices with billions of sensors that track, monitor and collect data. This continuously connected environment opens up a new frontier of security and compliance risk. Organizations of all kinds need to rethink their security policies and understand how connected devices will affect the safety of their intellectual property, data, and networks. This webinar will be a guide for organizations and business leaders looking to embrace IoT innovation without sacrificing their security defenses.
