"We are tremendously humbled by this recognition," said Ameresco's vice president of human resources Lauren Todd. "Not only is it a reflection of our tremendous execution, but it is also a testament to our companywide commitment to innovation. We're proud this honor exemplifies all of the hard work that has gone into generating growth and positive momentum within our rapidly changing industry."

This announcement follows Ameresco's inaugural Environmental, Social and Corporate Governance (ESG) report, which was centered around the concept "Doing Well by Doing Good." The energy solutions company is eager to continue their work in delivering reliable and sustainable solutions and in making Ameresco a choice employer.

"Over the past 20 years, Ameresco has maintained a relentless focus on leading the quest to change the world as a trusted sustainability partner," said George Sakellaris, Ameresco's founder, president and CEO. "As a clean tech market leader, we are proud to see this industry recognition, and even more excited as we pursue the tremendous opportunity on the horizon."

The America's Best Mid-Sized Companies list was compiled with companies whose market value ranged between $2 billion and $10 billion, and whose share price was greater than $5. Across industries, rankings were determined by earnings growth and sales growth over the course of both 12 months and 5 years as well as 52-week total return.
