Cummins CIO Gail Farnsley Named to Computerworld's 2008 "Premier 100 IT Leaders" List

COLUMBUS, Ind.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--

Computerworld, a leading news and information provider for the IT industry, announced today that it has selected Gail Farnsley, Vice President and CIO for Cummins Inc. (NYSE:CMI), as one of its 2008 Premier 100 IT Leaders.

Computerworld's Premier 100 IT Leaders Awards Program honors executives who show exemplary technology leadership in resolving pressing business problems. Honorees demonstrate the ability to foster creativity and challenging work environments, envision fresh approaches to business challenges and effectively manage IT investments.

Farnsley joined Cummins in 1997 as the Director of Corporate IT. She became Chief Information Executive in 2005, and was named Vice President and CIO in 2006. "This recognition is truly a reflection of the hard work and dedication of our IT organization," Farnsley said. "I am honored to be recognized alongside so many creative and strategic thinkers across various industries."

Cummins Chief Financial Officer Jean Blackwell added, "Gail and her organization have done terrific work to meet the IT needs of Cummins, which has experienced significant growth in recent years. Gail also has worked tirelessly to bring together IT professionals from around the globe to work effectively with one another."

Farnsley earned her bachelor's degree from Bowling Green State University, and her MBA from the Krannert School of Business at Purdue University. Prior to joining Cummins, she worked at Georgia Pacific, where she was a systems analyst and project manager.

The complete class of Computerworld's Premier 100 IT Leaders for 2008 appears online at <http://www.premier100.com> and in the Dec. 10, 2007, issue of Computerworld (www.computerworld.com).
