Prologis Research: Demand Growth Across Customer Industries

New Report Indicates Broad Diversity of Demand, Growing Impact of E-Commerce

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- Prologis, Inc. (NYSE: PLD), the leading global owner, operator and developer of industrial real estate, today published a global research paper titled, "The Growth of Logistics Real Estate: An Analysis of Demand by Leading Customer Industries."

The report's key finding shows demand for industrial real estate continues to be diverse, with many industries expanding. The company's research team focuses its analysis on three areas:

- First, consumer-facing customers, the largest industry concentration within logistics, comprised the largest share of leasing activity last year;
- Second, several sectors experienced strong growth, including electronics, housing, auto, and e-commerce; and
- Third, the paper highlights third party logistics (3PL) providers, who will be a source of growth going forward.

"The outlook for the growth of customer businesses and logistics demand is strong," said Chris Caton, vice president and head, Prologis Research. "In fact, decision-making surrounding new leases clearly improved in the past year. Customers are increasingly recognizing the opportunity to lock in current rates ahead of further rate increases given today's low vacancy rates, modest supply pipelines, and upward trend in replacement costs."
