LAND-LIGHT: OPERATING PLATFORM RELATIONSHIPS

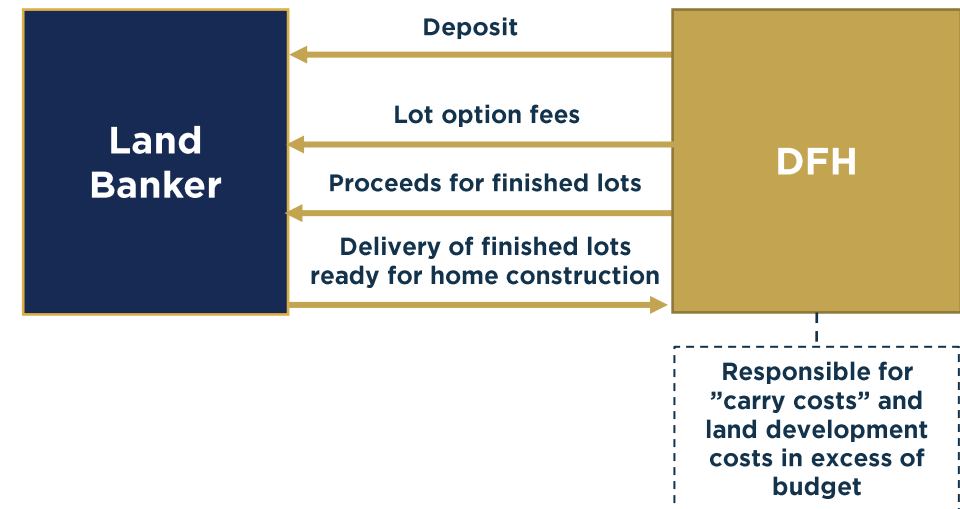

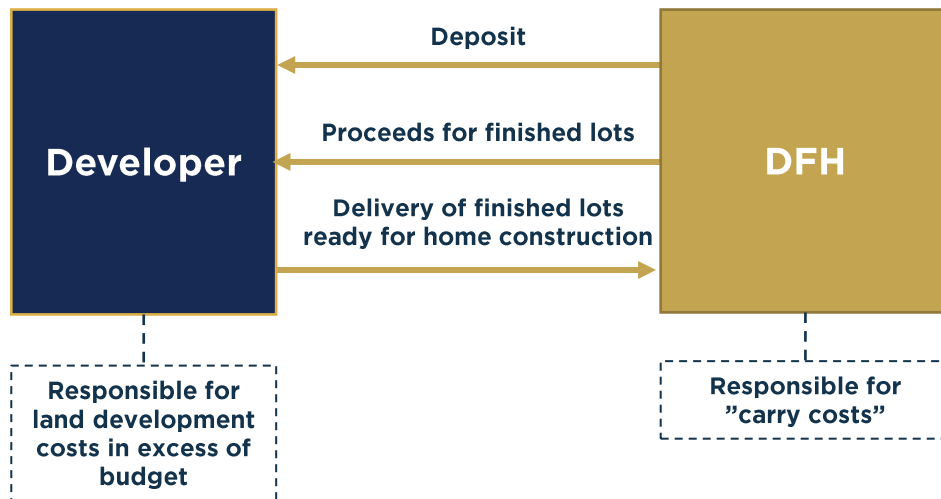

Traditional Third-Party Lot Purchase Contracts and Land Bank Option Contracts

Traditional Third-Party Lot Developer Purchase Contract

- Lots are controlled through non-refundable purchase contracts with third-party developers
- Local land development companies produce finished lots (finished pad-ready, utilities stubbed, roads paved) for sale to homebuilders
- DFH places deposits on lots up to 18 months ahead of delivery dates on rolling takedowns, which correspond to the anticipated sales pace of communities
- DFH places deposits on lots (under contract) to secure purchase agreements

Third-Party Land Bank Option Contract

- Lots are controlled through land banking arrangements
- Land bank partners acquire bulk finished lots or entitled land to develop on DFH's behalf
- Land bank partners also fund project costs (if required) while DFH manages the overall land development
- Finished lots are then sold by the land banker to DFH on a rolling takedown basis, which correspond to the anticipated sales pace of communities
- DFH pays option fees and carry costs on land optioned from the land banker
