Richard MacPherson commented: "We are excited to participate in these premier investor conferences, which provide an excellent opportunity to engage with the investment community and discuss our latest milestone achievements and upcoming catalysts. These conferences follow our recent revenue guidance announcement, where we outlined expectations of at least $23 million in revenue in 2025, driven by the continued momentum in our air business, with additional upside from both our ongoing IP defense initiatives and the recently launched water technologies. With our growing market share in mercury emissions capture technologies and the ongoing success of our IP licensing, we are well-positioned for significant growth in 2025 and beyond. I look forward to sharing our progress and strategy with investors as we strive to create sustainable, long-term value for my fellow shareholders."

A live audio webcast and archive of both presentations will be available using the respective
