David Congdon of ODFL Named to Fortune List

2015 Businessperson of Year focuses on leaders of high-performing companies

THOMASVILLE, N.C., Nov. 13, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- Fortune magazine has named David Congdon, vice chairman and CEO of Old Dominion Freight Line, to its Businessperson of the Year list.

The annual feature spotlights 50 CEOs who lead their companies to steady, consistent performance year over year, no matter the economy or market disruptions that could impact their businesses.

"I am grateful for this recognition from Fortune and truly humbled by the honor," Mr. Congdon said. "Most important, this recognition is clearly a testament to the entire OD Family and it is an honor daily to lead and work with them. Believe me, this does not happen by accident and it takes a dedicated team to accomplish."

The selection criteria for this honor is very detailed and Fortune considers more than two-dozen metrics. Financial results, including 12-month and three-year growth in profits and revenues, figure prominently in the magazine's analysis. Concrete financial results and exemplary long-term performance of the company were key drivers of the ranking.

For the last five years of financial results, ODFL has consistently increased revenue, operating income and net income, from 2010 through the third quarter of 2015. Also factored in is a company's stock performance and total shareholder returns over the same periods.

Nonfinancial elements, like business influence, leadership style, and strategic initiatives, play a part in the evaluation as well. To round out its thinking, Fortune consults leadership experts.
