SiriusXM to Expand Next Generation Connected Vehicle Services for American Honda

- New agreement includes a broad range of connected vehicle services for Acura and Honda vehicles

NEW YORK, Feb. 2, 2016 /PRNewswire/ -- SiriusXM Connected Vehicle Services Inc., a subsidiary of SiriusXM, will provide the next generation of connected vehicle services for Acura and Honda vehicles. A new, five-year agreement extends the relationship between SiriusXM and American Honda Motor Co., Inc. to help deliver a new and expanded array of safety, security and convenience services.

SiriusXM has been delivering connected vehicle services to Honda and Acura customers since 2013 through HondaLink and AcuraLink. HondaLink and AcuraLink provide convenient access to maps, weather, restaurants and points of interest, in addition to remote and assist services. Users can also schedule service appointments, repairs and more.

American Honda will start to expand on these core services, adding new and improved features starting with the launch of 2017 Acura vehicles. The updated standard package includes four years of Automatic Crash Notification and SOS emergency assist on select Acura vehicles, an extension of the company's commitment to enhancing the security of their customers.

"This new agreement is a testament to our commitment to deliver reliable in-vehicle services, and we are proud that American Honda has chosen SiriusXM to provide its next generation of connected vehicle services to its drivers," said Steve Cook, Executive Vice President, Sales and Automotive, SiriusXM. "Delivering a comprehensive suite of safety, security, and convenience services to support American Honda's customers, along with our critically-acclaimed satellite radio service, deepens our valuable relationship with American Honda."

"American Honda is committed to providing today's consumers with cutting-edge features that enable a safe, more intuitive and better connected experience," said John Mendel, Executive Vice President, American Honda Motor Co., Inc.
