Core Earnings is a non-GAAP measure. For a reconciliation of Core Earnings to GAAP Net Income, please refer to the Reconciliation of Core Earnings below.*

Second Quarter 2016 & Subsequent Highlights:

- Non-Agency Securities & Call Rights-
 - In the second quarter of 2016, New Residential continued to execute its deal collapse strategy by exercising clean-up call rights on 12 seasoned, Non-Agency deals totaling $291 million UPB. In addition, the Company completed its seventh Non-Agency called loan securitization, totaling $306 million, in May 2016.
 - During the year, the Company made significant progress in growing its Non-Agency securities portfolio as part of an effort to accelerate its call rights strategy. Year to date, New Residential increased its Non-Agency RMBS net equity from $374 million at the end of fourth quarter 2015 to $715 million at the end of second quarter 2016.

- Valuation of the Company's Non-Agency holdings increased by $68 million during the quarter from unrealized mark-to-market gains, resulting in a $0.30 per share increase to book value.

- Excess MSRs -

- During the quarter, New Residential made notable progress towards obtaining the necessary state and agency approvals to become fully eligible to own MSR's. As a result of these efforts, the Company, through its subsidiary New Residential Mortgage LLC, is eligible to own Non-Agency MSR's across 49 U.S. states, up from 46 states in first quarter 2016. In addition, during the quarter, New Residential obtained approvals to be a Fannie Mae Servicer and a Federal Housing Administration ("FHA") Lender. As a result, New Residential Mortgage LLC is now eligible to own MSR's relating to loans owned by Fannie Mae or loans insured by FHA. The Company expects to obtain California state approval and remaining agency approvals during the second half of 2016.⁽¹⁾
- New Residential experienced a below-industry average increase in prepayments during the quarter as a result of the Company's existing recapture provisions and differentiated collateral characteristics. In the second quarter, New Residential's average Gross CPR increased 2.0% (average Net CPR, including recapture, increased by 1.8%), compared to an average industry Gross CPR increase of 4.8%.⁽²⁾
- As part of the Company's continued efforts to diversify funding, the Company obtained two new financing facilities, which include a secured $300 million financing collateralized by Non-Agency Excess MSR's and a secured $225 million financing collateralized by Agency Excess MSR's.

- Servicer Advances -

- During the quarter, New Residential continued to work with its servicing partners to reduce its servicer advance balance. Year to date, the Company successfully reduced its servicer advance balance by 13%, from $7.6 billion as of fourth quarter 2015 to $6.6 billion as of second quarter 2016.
- In the second quarter, New Residential continued to improve advance financing by reallocating financing capacity, increasing advance rates, extending maturities and lowering cost of funds. In particular, the Company issued $400 million of 3-year maturity servicer advance term notes in June 2016, and closed a new $185 million 2-year servicer advance facility in May 2016. Furthermore, the Company increased the capacity and extended the maturity on a $950 million advance financing facility.

(1) As of August 1, 2016. Eligibility obtained as of the date of this press release relates to Non-Agency MSR's only, other than express references to MSR's relating to Fannie Mae loans or FHA-insured loans. New Residential may not be able to receive remaining approvals during 2H 2016 or at all.

(2) Gross Constant Prepayment Rate ("CPR") does not include recapture. Industry Gross CPR calculation has been prepared by New Residential and includes only prepayment data for MSR's with a coupon and seasoning that management believes are comparable to the weighted average of New Residential's existing MSR portfolio. The inclusion of industry prepayment data with different characteristics, including dissimilar weighted average coupon and seasoning would likely change the average Industry Gross CPR. Determinations of comparability have been made by management based on New Residential's current MSR portfolio and the portfolio's collateral characteristics. Other industry participants may calculate Industry Gross CPR in a different manner. A change in, or the diversification of, New Residential's MSR portfolio could change the appropriate calculation of Industry Gross CPR. Industry data is initially taken from eMBS and CoreLogic's Loan Performance database as of June 30, 2016.

CORE EARNINGS

New Residential has four primary variables that impact the Company's operating performance: (i) the current yield earned on the Company's investments, (ii) the interest expense under the debt incurred to finance the Company's investments, (iii) the Company's operating expenses and taxes and (iv) the Company's realized and unrealized gains or losses, including any impairment, on the Company's investments. "Core earnings" is a non-GAAP measure of the Company's operating performance, excluding the fourth variable above and adjusts the earnings from the consumer loan investment to a level yield basis. Core earnings is used by management to evaluate the Company's performance without taking into account: (i) realized and unrealized gains and losses, which although they represent a part of the Company's recurring operations, are subject to significant variability and are generally limited to a potential indicator of future economic performance; (ii) incentive compensation paid to the Company's Manager; (iii) non-capitalized transaction-related expenses; and (iv) deferred taxes, which are not representative of current operations.

While incentive compensation paid to the Company's Manager may be a material operating expense, the Company excludes it from core earnings because (i) from time to time, a component of the computation of this expense will relate to items (such as gains or losses) that are excluded from core earnings, and (ii) it is impractical to determine the portion of the expense related to core earnings and non-core earnings, and the type of earnings (loss) that created an excess (deficit) above or below, as applicable, the incentive compensation threshold. To illustrate why it is impractical to determine the portion of incentive compensation expense that should be allocated to core earnings, the Company notes that, as an example, in a given period, the Company may have core earnings in excess of the incentive compensation threshold but incur losses (which are excluded from core earnings) that reduce total earnings below the incentive compensation threshold. In such case, the Company would either need to (a) allocate zero incentive compensation expense to core earnings, even though core earnings exceeded the incentive compensation threshold, or (b) assign a "pro forma" amount of incentive compensation expense to core earnings, even though no incentive compensation was actually incurred. The Company believes that neither of these allocation methodologies achieves a logical result. Accordingly, the exclusion of incentive compensation facilitates comparability between periods and avoids the distortion to the Company's non-GAAP operating measure that would result from the inclusion of incentive compensation that relates to non-core earnings.

With regard to non-capitalized transaction-related expenses, management does not view these costs as part of the Company's core operations as they are considered by management to be similar to realized losses incurred at acquisition. Non-capitalized transaction-related expenses are generally legal and valuation service costs, as well as other professional service fees, incurred when the Company acquires certain investments, as well as costs associated with the acquisition and integration of acquired businesses.

In the fourth quarter of 2014, the Company modified its definition of core earnings to include accretion on held-for-sale loans as if they continued to be held-for-investment. Although the Company intends to sell such loans, there is no guarantee that such loans will be sold or that they will be sold within any expected timeframe. During the period prior to sale, the Company continues to receive cash flows from such loans and believe that it is appropriate to record a yield thereon. This modification had no impact on core earnings in 2014 or any prior period. In the second quarter of 2015, the Company modified its definition of core earnings to exclude all deferred taxes, rather than just deferred taxes related to unrealized gains or losses, because the Company believes deferred taxes are not representative of current operations. This modification was applied prospectively due to only immaterial impacts in prior periods. In the first quarter of 2016, the Company modified its definition of core earnings to limit accreted interest income on RMBS where the Company receives par upon the exercise of associated call rights based on the estimated value of the underlying collateral, net of related costs including advances. The Company made the modification in order to be able to accrete to the lower of par or the net value of the underlying collateral, in instances where the net value of the underlying collateral is lower than par. The Company believes this amount represents the amount of accretion the Company would have expected to earn on such bonds had the call rights not been exercised. This modification had no impact on core earnings in prior periods.

Management believes that the adjustments to compute "core earnings" specified above allow investors and analysts to readily identify and track the operating performance of the assets that form the core of the Company's activity, assist in comparing the core operating results between periods, and enable investors to evaluate the Company's current core performance using the same measure that management uses to operate the business. Management also utilizes core earnings as a measure in its decision-making process relating to improvements to the underlying fundamental operations of the Company's investments, as well as the allocation of resources between those investments, and management also relies on core earnings as an indicator of the results of such decisions. Core earnings excludes certain recurring items, such as gains and losses (including impairment as well as derivative activities) and non-capitalized transaction-related expenses, because they are not considered by management to be part of the Company's core operations for the reasons described herein. As such, core earnings is not intended to reflect all of the Company's activity and should be considered as only one of the factors used by management in assessing the Company's performance, along with GAAP net income which is inclusive of all of the Company's activities.

The primary differences between core earnings and the measure the Company uses to calculate incentive compensation relate to (i) realized gains and losses (including impairments), (ii) non-capitalized transaction-related expenses and (iii) deferred taxes (other than those related to unrealized gains and losses). Each are excluded from core earnings and included in the Company's incentive compensation measure (either immediately or through amortization). In addition, the Company's incentive compensation measure does not include accretion on held-for-sale loans and the timing of recognition of income from consumer loans is different. Unlike core earnings, the Company's incentive compensation measure is intended to reflect all realized results of operations. The Gain on Remeasurement of Consumer Loans Investment was treated as an unrealized gain for the purposes of calculating incentive compensation and was therefore excluded from such calculation.

Core earnings does not represent and should not be considered as a substitute for, or superior to, net income or as a substitute for, or superior to, cash flows from operating activities, each as determined in accordance with U.S. GAAP, and the Company's calculation of this measure may not be comparable to similarly entitled measures reported by other companies.
