Ball Announces Retirement of David A. Westerlund

BROOMFIELD, Colo., May 24, 2011 /PRNewswire/ -- Ball Corporation (NYSE: BLL) announced today that David A. Westerlund, executive vice president, administration, and corporate secretary, will retire later this year. Westerlund, 60, will conclude a 36-year career with Ball.

"David has been a key driver of our human resources, compliance and administration activities, and throughout his career has played an important role in maintaining our culture and in our overall corporate success," said John A. Hayes, Ball's president and chief executive officer. "He has also served in volunteer leadership positions with the United Way and other community organizations, representing Ball proudly in our local communities, both here in Colorado and in Indiana."

Lisa A Pauley, vice president, administration and compliance, will assume responsibility for the company's human resources, administration and compliance functions. Pauley joined Ball in 1981 in the company's aerospace systems division. She was named Ball Corporation's senior director, administration and compliance, in 2004 and has been vice president, administration and compliance, since 2007.
